

Peer support

Strength through peer activities of organisations

When people suffering from the same disease get together, they share a sense of togetherness. Peer groups offer the best possible support.

Organisations provide their members with various group activities, lectures, information events, trips, travel, festivities and art activities. Events offered by various organisations have approximately 30,000 participants every year.

Peer support

RMD peer support volunteers act as the first contact and aid for people who have recently been diagnosed with RMDs. These trained volunteers listen, offer hints on how to live with a disease, forward the person concerned to a professional, if required, and guide people to peer activities of RMD organisations.

Ask more from your nearest Rheurma Association!